

Dissertation Breakthrough: From Confusion to Graduation and Beyond

An online instruction and support group led by Craig Chalquist, PhD.

Perhaps you have no idea of what your topic is. Or too many ideas. Confusion about how to research and write about your topic. Worry about how broad or narrow the work seems to be getting. Lack of support during a lonely journey. Meanwhile, the dissertation clock is ticking...

I have worked closely with dissertation students for nearly two decades: long enough to have seen all the difficulties and exactly how to overcome them. I've helped many students get unstuck and helped graduates publish and promote their important work. I also teach research and writing skills. Dissertation writing can and should be creative, enlivening, and inspiring.

Each Dissertation Breakthrough group is kept small: 4 people working together for an hour via Zoom twice a month. Cost: $50 per session assuming an attendance of 4 per group. Bring your questions, blockages, and dilemmas. The meetings will be entirely about getting what you need to move forward toward graduation. Come for as long as it benefits you to.

Facilitator:

Craig Chalquist, PhD is a professor, graduate research and writing instructor, dissertation chair, former associate provost, former dissertation office director, journal editor, and author of fifteen books and various papers and book chapters. Visit his webpage at Chalquist.com.

To find out more: craig@chalquist.com.